CELESTIAL LINGUISTS.

The Remarkable English Displayed in Two Chinese Laundry Advertisements.

On upper Third avenue, Brooklyn, two slant-eyed Celestials have opened laundries within a few doors of each other, and are engaged in a fierce business rivalry. So close is the competition between the Chinamen that each is driven to rather startling efforts in the way of advertising with the purpose in view of distancing his rival. One day recently, says the New York Times, the following inspiration, set forth in sprawling black letters on a huge white canvas, appeared outside the door of one of the rival laundries: "If you are lookin' for a clean shirt we are it."

Noticing the crowd which his rival's announcement had attracted about the latter's door, and not understanding wherein lay the force of the attraction, the second laundryman consulted with an Italian cobbler next door, for whose knowledge of English he entertained the most profound respect. The result was that the following counter proclamation soon made its appearance in the window of the rival laundry: "Dirty shirt heere not! If do one ten dollars each give."

That section of South Brooklyn is losing sleep these nights puzzling over this second sign.

Sold His Pension to the Government.

The duke of Norfolk has just commuted a pension which has a curious history. It goes as far back as Flodden Field, where his ancestor, the earl of Surrey, commanded, and was awarded a perpetual pension of £200 a year for his victorious soldiery. The money has been paid annually, century in and century out, ever since, and now the duke has let the country off for $4,000 down.

CHINESE PHYSICIANS.

They Prepare Many Medicines, and Some of Them Are Very Bitter Decoctions.

The taking of a first dose of Chinese medicine is an ordeal which can be better imagined than described. It is invariably a bitter decoction, says Lippincott's. If the patient prefers, the herbs are given him in square paste-board boxes holding about a pint each, and he "cooks" them at home. A Chinese prescription contains from ten to sixteen varieties of herbs, flowers, nuts, gums, barks and roots. More than 3,000 species are classified and used as medicine, but of these only some 600 are in general use. Whether the patient takes the remedies at the sanitarium or at home, he is requested to present himself every day before the doctor for another pulse examination, so that every change in his condition may be noted and the prescription may be varied accordingly. The Chinese are clever chemists in the line of pharmaceutical preparations, and prepare many medicines for their own use in the form of pills and powders; but these are employed by the Chinese physicians in treating the ailments of white people only to a limited extent. The reason given is that the simple, hot decoctions of the fresh root or plant are the best form, because the most readily assimilated into the system.

The Best Donkeys.

The best donkeys come from Arabia. They have clean, smooth coats, hold their heads high and are used only for riding purposes. Many are sent to Persia, where they sell for high sums. They are well looked after and their harnessings are of the richest.

Curious Suit Over A Labor Strike.

A singular case has just been decided in England by Lord Justice Romer, growing out of public charity having been given to men who were out on strike. The case grew out of the recent coal mining strike in Wales, when about 7,000 men refused to work for the wages offered. When the strikers became very hungry they applied to the guardians of the poor for relief and got it. Certain employers and taxpayers then went to the chancery court by the attorney general, with complaint against the guardians for having given the poor fund on insufficient grounds. The court decided against the attorney-general and the complainants on the ground that they had gone to work the wrong way for redress. While the court admitted that the guardians of the poor would not have been justified in giving away the poor funds to people confessedly on strike, it was not shown that the guardians knew those facts about the strike, although the matter was of public notoriety. But the real point of the case was that the court told the complainants that the way to do when an abode man will not work when he has an opportunity to proceed against him as a vagrant. Of course it was not the business of the judge to say what can be done with 7,000 vagrants all arrested at the same time. It is sufficient to know that the courts were on the side of the laboring men.
